Maybe it's not worth the chase. We can talk another time.

I did learn that the tunnel was a 10 x 10 ft and the first 100 ft had only a few supports sets, and the next 600 ft was good rock, no support; a collapse at 700 ft required them to drive 100 ft around the collapse and then back on drift.

If the upper levels are open somewhere, the air should move. Do you know anything about the upper levels – closures, collapsed, etc.

Have a good weekend.

[Citizen Name/Ex. 6] is more difficult to find. I can send snail mail to him?

The [Citizen Name/Ex. 6] family has split due to arguments over mineral claims. [Citizen Name/Ex. 6] both worked in the Gold King Mine according to [Citizen Name/Ex. 6] Now the two do not talk to each other.
